Regulator of occupational therapists in Ontario

People of all ages may need support with everyday activities at different points in their lives.

Illness, injury, conditions, or aging can make familiar tasks harder. Occupational therapists help people of all abilities do the activities that matter to them by suggesting tools and equipment, strategies, or adjustments to make daily life safer and easier.

In Ontario, occupational therapists are regulated health professionals. They must follow standards and deliver safe, ethical and quality care.

Questions? Please contact us. We can help. You can also check the List of Registered Occupational Therapists online to confirm a therapist is registered.
